A K-12 Guide to Finding a Great School for Your Child

About GreatSchools

GreatSchools is an independent, nonprofit organization that improves education by inspiring parents to get involved. We empower parents with information and tools so they can choose the best school for their children, support their children's education, and improve schools in their communities. Parents choose GreatSchools to connect with each other – to find the right schools, share stories and advice, and get their parenting questions answered.

In the past year alone, more than 37 million people visited GreatSchools (www.greatschools.org). With hundreds of thousands of ratings and parent reviews about schools across the country, GreatSchools is the paramount parent-to-parent education community.

About Fight For Children

With strong support from businesses and individuals in Washington, DC, Fight For Children is an independent not-for-profit organization that recognizes, promotes, and cultivates quality education for low-income children in Washington, DC. Fight For Children also addresses the critical link between good health and improved academic performance.

One of Fight For Children's signature initiatives is its Quality Schools Initiative that encourages replication of high quality programs that improve student achievement in public, charter, and independent schools in DC. Using proceeds from its annual Fight Night event, Fight For Children also provides financial support to other local nonprofits that provide education and healthcare services to low-income children.

The Partnership

GreatSchools and Fight For Children share the goals of promoting school choice based on quality and fostering parent behavior that 1) supports high educational achievement and 2) enrolls children in high performing schools. Together, GreatSchools and Fight for Children are enhancing the quality and quantity of information about schools in DC and better equipping parents to support their children's education.

How to Use this Guide

The DC School Chooser is designed to help parents choose a school in Washington, DC. It will help you explore your options and find the right school for your child. It explains what you need to do, when you need to do it, and is your starting point in your research.

Need a QUICK START? Here are ways this book can immediately help you with your search:

1. Search by Star Rating: Identify high performing schools using the 4-5 Star Index on p. 162.
2. Search by Theme: Find schools with special focuses (arts, technology) using the Theme Index on p. 163.
3. Search by Ward: Narrow (or expand) your location choices using the Ward Index on p. 165.
4. Review School Profiles: Jump right into researching schools. First, be sure to review the School Profiles Key on p. 7 to understand the information you will find for each school (e.g., application deadlines, school size, etc.).
5. Use the Workbook: Skip directly to the Workbook on p. 13 to take you through the selection process.

How GreatSchools collects data. Information for the GreatSchools Web site and the DC School Chooser comes from a variety of sources including OSSE, DCPS, PCSB and the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) for items including but not limited to test scores, teacher credentials, and school enrollment. Additional information is provided by individual schools, LEA or other websites.

Please note: some schools may change their information after the DC School Chooser has been printed. Therefore, we always recommend you contact and visit schools in person to get all your questions answered.

Test Score Advice and Information

Test scores give you one indication of the academic success of a school, but they should not be used as the only factor to judge a school. It is important to consider other features such as day-to-day classroom instruction, teacher qualifications, principal leadership, student-teacher ratio, school safety, and the school's mission and philosophy.

2011 Test Score Rating. The 2011 Test Score Rating is an average of the Math and Reading proficiency test score results of the 2011 DC-CAS (District of Columbia Comprehensive Assessment System) for DCPS and public charter schools only. Results of the DC-CAS are reported annually by OSSE¹. Depending on the average we calculate, a school is rated:

- ★☆☆☆☆ = School scored between 0-20% proficient
- ★★☆☆☆ = School scored between 21-40% proficient
- ★★★☆☆ = School scored between 41-60% proficient
- ★★★★☆ = School scored between 61-80% proficient
- ★★★★★ = School scored between 81-100% proficient

While we understand test scores can only show you a snapshot in time of how a school is doing academically, it is still a good place to start. We recommend you consider the following:

- * 4- and 5-star schools: Most students at these schools score well on the DC-CAS. You can focus your research and visit questions on enrichment opportunities and course offerings that support your child's interests in addition to school culture, programs, etc.
- * 3-star schools: Student scores at these schools are not consistently high. Focus your visit questions on how students who are similar to your child do academically, as well as enrichment opportunities or academic supports, etc.

- * 1- and 2-star schools: Most students at these schools score poorly on the DC-CAS. Ask the school why? While low scorers are generally a bad sign, there can be special circumstances to consider.

Private School Test Scores. In DC, public and private schools do not always give students the same tests or test them in the same way. Because tests measure and report achievement differently, scores from one test will not be the same on another. Private schools in DC are currently not required to give standardized tests or report test scores publicly for those that do give such tests.

Finally, any school should be willing to answer questions around student achievement, and if not, be skeptical and dig deeper!

Use the GreatSchools Web site for More Information

www.greatschools.org provides a wealth of current information in a parent-friendly, easy-to-read format to help you in your school search. On the Web site, you will find:

- * Test scores and GreatSchools test score ratings for public and public charter schools
- * School reviews and ratings from parents, students, and teachers
- * A parent community where you can ask questions about local schools or give advice to others
- * Information about teachers and the student population
- * Details about extracurricular activities, sports, clubs, and more from the school principal
- * A search function that allows you to compare schools and districts

- * Helpful articles and newsletters about topics such as homework help or bullying prevention
- * A special education section for and about families with students who have special needs

Why is Choosing the Right School Important?

When you choose a great school for your child, from preschool to high school, it will have a lasting impact on his or her life. Schools vary widely. They have different degrees of success in teaching their students math, reading, and other subjects; providing a safe environment for learning; preparing students for the world of work and college; and developing well-adjusted, responsible young adults. Some schools do many of these things well, and some schools may have mixed results, while still others face significant challenges.

When it comes to education, one size does not fit all. Different children thrive in different settings, so it is important for you to consider what type of school and school environment will help ensure your child's success. Choosing the right school for your child may seem difficult, but you can do it if you take it one step at a time. If you want more help or information, please call the GreatSchools DC Parent Hotline at 202-431-5538 or email us at dc@greatschools.org.

Streamline your search with the GreatSchools DC Web page:
www.greatschools.org/dc

Step 1: Think about needs

Your student's needs

As you begin thinking about choosing a school, first consider carefully what your child needs from his or her school. There are many important things to think about:

Instruction and curriculum: What teaching style will best help your child succeed? Does your child perform better in a traditional classroom in which the teacher directs all activities? Or does your child need more freedom to explore and pursue his or her own interests? Is it important for your child to study religion, or a foreign language? Does your child need a college prep curriculum or training for a particular job? How important are test scores?

If you are looking for a high school, additional questions you may want to ask include: Does the school offer Advanced Placement (AP) courses? If so, which ones? How do students score on those exams? How do students score on PSAT/SAT or ACT college entrance exams? What colleges or fields of study do graduating seniors typically go?

School and class size: Will your child do better in a small school where she/he will get more one-on-one attention or a large school that offers more special services, programs, and activities? Keep in mind that the total number of students in a school does not tell the whole story. You may find a large school that also offers small classes. You may also find that classes at a small school are larger than you expected.

Special programs and services: Does your child have special needs? Look for a school that can provide the following kinds of support services:

- * Special education
- * Honors/gifted and talented programs
- * Classes for English Language Learners (ELL)
- * Counseling

- * Accommodations for a physical disability
- * Speech services

Social and extra-curricular issues: What is your ideal makeup for a school for your child? Should it be co-ed or single sex? What type of racial/ethnic/socio-economic mix is important to you? What activities (e.g., chess club, yearbook) does your child want to participate in? Do you want a school that provides community service opportunities?

Educating the whole child: Is it important for your child to be taught more than just core academic subjects (English/language arts, math, science, social studies)? Does the school offer arts programs or physical education classes? The arts provide opportunities for students to express themselves creatively, and learning to play a musical instrument instills discipline.

A student who participates in regular physical education is more likely to remain motivated to stay healthy and physically active throughout adulthood. If the school you are considering does not provide arts or physical education during the regular school day, find out what after-school activities are available.

Your family's needs

The choice of your child's school will affect your whole family. You will need to balance your child's needs with those of your family.

Transportation: Will you be driving your child or will she/he be getting to school independently? Is it important that the school be near a Metro stop or bus line? Do you want the school to be near your home or your job? Does your child need special services?* (*Note: Public schools provide transportation only for special needs students.)

Before- and/or after-school care: Some schools provide both before- and after-care, some offer one or the other, and others do not offer them at all. The schools that do provide these programs sometimes do so for free, and others charge a fee. You will want to get information on what programs may be available, the potential cost, and the hours of operation.

Meal programs: All District of Columbia Public Schools (DCPS) offer free breakfast for all students and free or reduced price lunch for eligible students. Many public charter schools do the same. Meal programs at private schools may vary, with some including the cost of meals in the tuition. You will want to call schools individually to get more details.

Free and reduced price meals: Your annual income must fall below the levels in this table to qualify for free or reduced price meals. The levels for the 2011-2012 school year are:²

Tuition and financial aid: If you are interested in a private school, tuition costs can vary along with what is included in those costs. Many schools also offer financial aid or accept other financial assistance (programs such as Capital Partners in Education and the Latino Student Fund to name a few).

D.C. Opportunity Scholarship Program (D.C. OSP): The D.C. Opportunity Scholarship Program was originally created in 2004 to provide low-income DC parents with expanded options for the education of their children by providing scholarships to attend non-public, K-12 institutions within the District. The scholarship helps cover most or all tuition and other educational expenses. It was recently re-authorized by Congress for another five years with a total of $20 million in aid available. The program is now administered by the DC Children & Youth Investment Trust Corporation (CYITC). For more information, call 1-888-329-6884 or email ospadmin@cyitc.org.

Parent involvement: Understanding how a school involves parents is something you should keep in mind when you are considering where to send your child. Contact the school to learn what the parent involvement policy is (most schools should have a written plan) and also use www.greatschools.org to connect with other parents to get their thoughts.

Sit down with your child and have a family conversation about the things you both want in a school and ask yourselves how important are those things (very, somewhat, not at all)? Use the DC School Chooser needs worksheet found on p. 14 to help you write it all down and keep track.

Number in family	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	Each additional
Reduced price meals	$20,147	$27,214	$34,281	$41,348	$48,415	$55,482	$62,549	$69,616	$7,067
Free meals	$14,157	$19,123	$24,089	$29,055	$34,021	$38,987	$43,953	$48,919	$4,966

²As reported by the USDA in the Federal Register on 03/25/11.

Step 2: Understand the choices

Public, private, public charter schools: What are they?

The good news is that there are many school options for DC parents and students. The key is to understand what those options are and the differences between them.

District of Columbia Public Schools (DCPS)

- * Public schools are free to every child that is a resident of the District of Columbia.
- * Starting in kindergarten, every child is assigned to and is guaranteed a spot in a neighborhood school based on the home address.
- * To apply to a different school, there is the “out of boundary” process (see p. 10).
- * Selective city-wide schools and specialized programs:

DCPS Specialized Citywide High Schools:

Any student can apply, regardless of where they live. Each has a specialized focus (e.g., Duke Ellington School for the Arts) with its own application process.

DCPS K-8 specialized programs: Some schools include specialized programs (e.g., Oyster-Adams dual language program – English/Spanish) or have a special focus for the entire school (e.g., Deal Middle School – International Baccalaureate Middle Years Program: MYP). Students assigned to these schools as their neighborhood school get priority, and other students must apply (see p. 10).

Public Charter Schools

- * Public charter schools are independently operated public schools that are open and free to all DC students regardless of their neighborhood or academic achievement.
- * The D.C. Public Charter School Board (PCSB) authorizes, oversees, and monitors all public charter schools.
- * Students from anywhere in the city may apply to any public charter school.
- * Each school has its own application process, and there are no application fees or tuition costs.
- * Public charter schools often have the freedom to develop specialized programs and create or select their curriculum.

Private Schools

- * Private schools are non-public schools that charge tuition for attendance.
- * Many have school-based aid and/or accept scholarships or other outside forms of financial aid.
- * Some private schools have religious affiliations.
- * Students who want to attend private schools must apply, and there may be required entrance exams and application fees.
- * Private schools have the freedom to develop specialized programs, curriculum and decide which students attend their school.
- * Private schools are not required to publish test score results, and may take different kinds of tests than DCPS and public charter schools.
- * No single organization is responsible for overseeing private schools, but most if not all are accredited (if not, it is important to find out why).

School profiles key

Tuition: the tuition-only cost for attending a private school (if a range is given, depends on grade level, number of children attending, etc); there may be other fees.

OSP: indicates if school participates in program.

School Size: final enrollment for the '10-'11 school year.³

Re-enrollment Rate: for elementary and middle schools, the percent of students who returned for the next grade between the '09-'10 and '10-'11 school years.

2010 Graduation Rate: for schools with 12th grade, percent of students who graduated as of October 2010.⁴

Uniforms: if yes, parents may have to purchase specific items.

Dress code: appears only if Uniforms is a "no." School has written policy but parents do not need to purchase specific items.

If a field is blank or N/A: contact school for information.

Step 3: Visit your top choices

Our Web site contains more than we could ever include in this printed guide, but no single piece of information tells the whole story. Visiting is the only way you can tell whether you and your child will feel safe and comfortable at the school. You will also be able to see whether the teachers are enthusiastic and the students are engaged in learning.

Now that you have narrowed your choices, it is time to visit the schools:

Schedule your visit. Pick three or four dates and times that work best for you and then call the school. Explain that you are considering applying or enrolling your child and would like to visit. Find out if you will be able to meet the principal and observe classes while you are there. Have your calendar handy so you can write down the date and time of your visit. School phone numbers are provided on the school profiles beginning on p. 21.

Think about what you want to see at the school. Before you go, use the DC School Chooser visit worksheet on p. 16 to help write down the questions you want to make sure you ask during your visit. (You can also print extra copies at www.greatschools.org/dc.)

Your observations of the school can start the moment you get there. Make sure you take the DC School Chooser things to watch for worksheet on p. 18 and a pen so you can record your observations and the answers to the questions you prepared in advance.

Arrive early. Plan to get to the school 10 minutes before your scheduled visit and check in at the main office when you arrive. That will give you a chance to check out the neighborhood and watch how the front office works (Do they greet you? Are they polite? Are phones answered promptly?). You may also receive a visitor's pass to wear during your visit.

J.O. Wilson Elementary School

Ask and observe. This is your chance to get the information you need to make the best choice for you and your child. You have prepared your questions in advance and you are ready, so do not be afraid to ask them or others if they come up. And don't worry if you forget to ask something important; you can always call later.

Visiting classrooms is an important part of the school visit and may tell you the most about whether the school is a good place for your child. Visit as many classes as you can, but when you are in classrooms do not disturb the students' learning.

Keep your eyes open and think about all the things you see: the schoolyard, the classrooms, and the area around the school. Record your observations on the DC School Chooser things to watch for worksheet you brought with you.

Have a great visit!

Step 4: Make your decision

Now that you have visited your top choices, you should have a good idea which schools are a good fit for your child. Start by looking over the notes you took during your school visits. Use your impressions from those visits and the information you gathered to follow these next steps. They will help you find the right school(s).

Eliminate schools where you felt unwelcome or unsafe.

Cross off any school on your list that does not seem like a comfortable place for you and your child. During your visit, were students roaming the halls instead of being in class? Was bad language used by students with no correction by an adult? Did it feel like the students ran the building?

Compare information about your choices to your worksheets about your child's needs and your family's needs. Look over the notes you filled in on the DC School Chooser needs worksheet on p. 14 (or printed from www.greatschools.org/dc) to see how the information you collected matches what you thought would best meet the needs of your child and family.

Look at your school visit notes and rank the schools on your list. Rank the schools based on how much you liked what you saw during your visits. Keep in mind things you noticed: cleanliness, students' behavior, enthusiasm of teachers, whether students seemed engaged, and the overall feeling you got from the school.

Review these school profiles again. Use the DC School Chooser and the profiles on www.greatschools.org/dc to remind yourself of specific features about each school, and then rank the schools again based on academic performance using the 2011 Test Score Rating and the DC-CAS test scores provided. Private schools take completely different kinds of tests, so if you are considering private schools, you can contact each individual school for test score information.

Keep in mind that students who attend high-performing schools are more likely to be prepared for college, the workplace, and life.

Make your decision. Once you have considered all these factors, your first choice may be obvious. If one of the schools ranks high in all categories, you have found your school! If the rankings are mixed, you may have to decide which qualities are most important to you.

Apply to more than one school. Your first choice may not be available, so you will want to apply to at least two other schools that meet most of your needs. This way, you work to ensure that your child has the opportunity to go to a school that you like.

Step 5: Apply and enroll on time

Different types of schools have their own procedures and deadlines. Review the information below and the enrollment calendar on p. 12 to help you get organized.

School Type	2012-2013 School Year Application Start and End Dates
DCPS neighborhood schools	None
DCPS Specialized Citywide High Schools (new application process).	November 18, 2011 – January 6, 2012 (Pending potential changes – for more information, visit www.dcps.dc.gov .)
DCPS non-neighborhood schools/specialized K-8 programs and PS/PK (Out of Boundary and Application Lottery)	January 30, 2012 - February 27, 2012 at 11:59pm* (Pending proposed change to the DC Municipal Regulations – for more information visit www.dcps.dc.gov .)
Private schools	Can vary, contact school directly or view profile
Public charter schools	Can vary, contact school directly or view profile (if date not listed, you can also visit www.dcpucpubliccharter.com)

DCPS Specialized Citywide High Schools: These high schools do not participate in the DCPS out of boundary lottery process nor are they neighborhood schools. They are open to any student anywhere in the city to apply to for high school.

For the first time, an online website will be used to apply to these schools for the 2012-2013 school year. There will be one single deadline and one, single online form for the application instead of separate forms and deadlines for each of these schools. The single application form will include all the “basic” pieces of information needed (e.g. home address, phone, etc.) so you will only have to complete that part once no matter how many of these schools to which you apply. The name for the form is the Common Application.

Depending on the school(s), there might be extra items required, so please make sure to review what schools may be asking for beyond the initial form. The Common Application will be accepted for the following schools:

- * Benjamin Banneker High School
- * Columbia Heights Education Campus
- * Duke Ellington School of the Arts
- * McKinley Technology High School
- * Phelps ACE High School
- * School Without Walls High School
- * Washington Metropolitan High School

After the schools’ selection process, students will receive one notification in mid-March letting them know which schools they have been accepted to or been waitlisted. For more information and updates, check out the DCPS website: www.dcps.dc.gov.

DCPS non-neighborhood schools – Out of Boundary Lottery: A process to apply to a DCPS school that is not your assigned neighborhood school. Parents may apply up to six different schools. Applications for the 2012-2013 school year will only be accepted online – no paper. You can begin applying on January 30, 2012. The deadline to submit all applications is 11:59 pm on February 27, 2012. Visit www.dcps.dc.gov for more information.

DCPS K-8 specialized programs: For specialized programs (like dual language at Oyster-Adams, etc.) you must use the out of boundary lottery.

Private schools: Each school has its own application procedures. Admission requirements will vary and may include student essays, student and parent interviews, letters of recommendation, and auditions or portfolios of work.

Public charter schools: You may apply to as many public charter schools as you like. Many have an “open enrollment period” during which they collect applications. At the end of this period, if more applications are received than there are spaces available, a lottery is held to determine how many students will be accepted. Either way, get your application in as soon as possible.

Early childhood programs: We do not list early childhood only programs in this guide, but you can go to www.greatschools.org/dc and search among the almost 150 options available for programs that specialize in early childhood. You can now go to www.readytotlearn.org a website by Fight For Children with tips and more resources about your options in DC.

DCPS

Offers approximately 5,600 spots in pre-school (starting at age 3) and pre-kindergarten (starting at age 4) programs across 84 schools.

Please note: spots are not guaranteed. You must apply through the DCPS Pre-School/Pre-K/Head Start Lottery. Applications are due by 11:59 pm on February 27, 2012*. Visit www.dcps.dc.gov for more information.

Public Charter Schools

Most public charter schools have preschool or pre-kindergarten programs, and some specialize in early childhood only. The standard charter school application should be used for these programs.

Private Schools

There are many options for private early childhood programs as well as regular private schools. Visit the GreatSchools Web site to find one that is the best for you.

DC School Chooser Workbook

This is a companion guide to help families choose a school. There are many schools to choose from, including DCPS schools, public charter schools and private schools. This Workbook will help you explore options and find the right school.

Five Steps to Choosing a School

- Step 1: Think about needs
- Step 2: Understand the choices
- Step 3: Visit your top choices
- Step 4: Make your decision
- Step 5: Apply and enroll

Involved parents. Successful kids.

Great Schools DC at The HIVE
2027 Martin Luther King Jr. Avenue SE | #101
Washington, D.C. 20020
Parent Hotline: 202.431.5538 | dc@greatschools.org

Step 1: Think about needs

Where a student goes to school will affect the family as a whole. Students' needs must balance with important factors that affect the entire family.

1. Talk together about what matters in a school, and list the 5-7 factors that matter most in the table below. Consider factors such as: school/class size, learning style, special education needs, arts, sports, other extracurriculars, school culture, languages, themes, location, transportation, school calendar, tuition/fees, friends, parental involvement, safety, playground, hot lunch, uniforms, etc.
 2. Talk about how important each factor is to the student and to the family, and fill in "very," "sort of," "not," "do not want," etc. next to each factor.
 3. Rank the factors you've listed in order of importance (1 is most important, 7 would be least important, etc.)

Step 2: Understand the choices

There are many schools in the city, so it will take a little time and effort to narrow down choices to the 2 or 3 schools to visit.

1. List the 2-3 schools you've already heard about that you think might be good and that you want to find out more about:

a. _____

b. _____

2. Use available resources to find information and narrow down choices. The following resources have different information, so use all of them if you can!

GreatSchools School Chooser: The School Chooser is a print guide that contains basic information about almost all the schools in the city. If you want a free copy, call the phone number on the cover of this guide.

www.greatschools.org: The GreatSchools Web site has even more information about schools, and you can search for specific features and compare among schools you want to know more about.

GreatSchools staff and volunteer coaches: Call the number on the front of this guide if you want free help with the research process. They will help you one-on-one and/or direct you to free workshops in the community.

School staff: It's always a good idea to make a list of what you want to know and call the school directly for answers.

3. Use the worksheet on page 4 to list schools you are interested in and what you learn about them.

Step 3: Visit your top choices

Now that you have narrowed your choices, it is time to visit. This is really the only way you will be able to tell if a school is a good fit for your child and for you.

How to make your visit a success:

1. Schedule your visit. Call the school ahead of time and set up a date and time for your visit. Find out if you will be able to speak to the principal (or vice principal) and teachers (if they are able). You also want to ask to watch classes not only at your child's grade, but the next one up. DO NOT just show up to the school.
2. Think about what you want to see. Look over the worksheets you filled out on pages 2 and 4, and use the worksheet on page 6 to help guide you. You should have 5 questions ready when you walk in the building. The more you do ahead of time to be ready, the better the visit will be.
3. Arrive early. You made the effort to schedule the visit, so it is good to show respect for the school and the staff by being on time. By arriving 10 minutes early, you have a chance to check out the neighborhood the school is in and watch how the front office works.
4. Ask and observe. The point of this visit is to get the information you need to make a choice, so asking questions is a good thing. Don't feel shy, speak up!
5. Make sure to write things down. Using the worksheet on page 6, make sure you take notes on the things you see as you are walking through the building/classrooms and write down the answers to your questions.
6. Say thank you. Make sure to thank everyone you spoke to during your visit (even if you just mouth the words to a teacher in a classroom so you don't disrupt anything).

If you get home and suddenly have some more questions to ask, that is ok. Write them down first, and then call the school to get the answers. Remember, the more questions you ask and the more answers you get, the easier it will be for you to make a good choice! BE SURE TO VISIT MORE THAN ONE SCHOOL BEFORE YOU DECIDE!

Things to Watch for When Walking Through the School and in the Classroom

School Name: _____

Visit Date: _____

ITEM	✓ = Yes, X = No
Is the front office friendly?
Are the building/classes/grounds clean?
Is there a gym or playground or field?
Is there an art room?
Is there a music room?
Is there a computer lab(s)?
Is there a science room(s)?
Does the school feel safe?
Are teachers active in the class?
Does it look like the teacher has a plan?
Are teachers respectful of students?
Are students respectful to the teacher?
Are students respectful to each other?
Are students focused on their work?
Are students working in groups?
Is student work posted on the walls?

Question 5:	Answer:

Step 4: Make your decision

1. List the top 5 priorities you named on page 2 in the first column.
2. Write the names of the 2-3 schools you visited across the top row.
3. In the column below each school, write “Yes” in a square if that school met the priority in that row or “No” if it did not.
4. If the schools you visited did not meet your priorities, return to Step 2 and research more schools or else visit more of the schools you already researched until you find at least 2 schools (3 is better) that meet your priorities.

Step 5: Apply and enroll

You are all set! You have made your choices! Now what? After all that good work you and your family did, it is time to fill in the applications for the schools (at least 2 or 3) that you chose as the best fit (if they are not already your neighborhood school).

Tips:

1. If you are interested in an independent charter, private school, or specialized public school program, call the school to get an application (or go to the school's Web site as they may have an online version you can fill out and send).
2. If you are interested in a traditional public school that is not your neighborhood school, contact your district office or check out their Web site for an application.
3. Make your own list of the items in each application and check them off as you get them done. Make sure you know when each application is due!

Glossary of education terms

Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP): No Child Left Behind requires that states set annual goals for school children based on state standards (statements, set by each state, of what students in grades K-12 should know and be able to do in content areas, i.e., English/Language Arts, mathematics, science, and social studies.) Testing in math and English/Language Arts every year determines whether these targets are met. If all groups of students do not reach these goals, the school has failed to make AYP. If this occurs for two years in a row, the school will be put on the state's "needing improvement" list.

Accountability: The notion that schools and school systems are responsible for the academic results of their students (i.e., meeting state standards). Under No Child Left Behind, the progress of every public and public charter school student in grades 3 through 8 must be measured each year in English/Language Arts and math and at least once during grades 10 through 12.

Block Schedule: A school schedule that creates longer segments of time for classes to take place. Some block schedules might have classes meet for two hours every other day rather than daily for one hour; others might have classes meet daily for a hundred minutes, but only for a semester rather than a full academic year.

Curriculum: The subject material that teachers teach.

English Language Learner (ELL): Individuals whose primary/native language is not English (can also be known as ESL: English as a Second Language or LEP: Limited English Proficient).

Local Education Agency (LEA): A school district. In DC, every public charter school is its own district.

Montessori: A school whose instructional emphasis is on creating a stimulating environment for children that includes an abundance of hands-on materials. These schools follow the philosophy of Maria Montessori, an educator who believed that children learn best when they have the opportunity to discover and learn in their own ways.

Needing Improvement: Individual schools are labeled needing improvement if they fail to make Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) two years in a row with all subgroups of students. The state is required to publish a list of needing improvement schools each year.

No Child Left Behind (NCLB) Law: A federal law designed to introduce statewide accountability systems that track the progress of schools and districts in improving student outcomes. The law allows states to determine how success is measured, usually by standardized testing. NCLB applies most strictly to schools that receive Title I money from the federal government.

Private School: A school that is established through private means and sustained through tuition and donations rather than by the government.

Proficient: A term that indicates a student is able to do something he or she is supposed to do at his/her age and grade level. Proficient is one of three terms generally used to characterize test scores, the others being "advanced" (higher performing) and "basic" (lower performing).

Public Charter School: A public school operating under a legal "charter" that permits some autonomy from the local school board and has, as a condition of its charter, certain required performance outcomes. Like all public schools, public charter schools must be non-religious and non-discriminatory.

Public School: A school supported by public funds and providing free education for children in a community.

Restructuring: Schools on the state needing improvement list for five consecutive years face mandatory restructuring. These actions may include reopening the school as a charter school or turning over school operations either to the state or to a private company with a demonstrated record of effectiveness.

School Choice: A broad term that refers to a parent's right to choose schooling options for their child.

Title I School: The federal government provides funding to schools with high numbers of children from low-income families. Every state receives Title I funding and this money must be put towards school improvement programs.

2012-2013 DC School Chooser Acknowledgements

While “thank you” seems like such a relatively small phrase to convey the depth of gratitude we feel for the help received from so many people in putting together the 2012-2013 DC School Chooser, we hope it will suffice.

Our special thanks to:

The school staff throughout DC: who took the time to fill out online profiles, gave us information over the phone or provided pictures to be used. Those details are what make this guide and www.greatschools.org so valuable to parents.

Archdiocese of Washington, D.C., DCPS and PCSB: for supporting this guide and for the staff that assisted in providing and “dogging down” various pieces of information, especially: Jeremy McDonald, Margery Yeager, Enoch Woodhouse, Nancy Iheanacho, Amy Lerman, Caroline Holkeboer, Steve Cartwright, Lawrence Lim, Sarah Johnson, Lamont Brittain and Nona Richardson.

Fight For Children: the entire staff – Michaela English, Skip McCoy, Jeff Travers, Martine Sadarangani, Anna Faryar, Kim Stevenson, Judi Wrench, Simon Jackson, Kristen Fagley, Liz Warnecki, and Jim Tardy – for being our first DC partner and always being available to provide support, advice, and a second home when needed.

Reingold, Inc.: the DC School Chooser design team – Joseph Ney, John Predmore, Mattie Winistorfer, Scott San Martin, and Gabino Villanueva – for once again giving the amazing thought, care and flexibility needed to make the DC School Chooser come to life.

The GreatSchools DC Advisory Council: for providing various points of view and advice in the most thoughtful of ways to help us make the DC School Chooser and the program as useful and responsive to parents as possible.

The entire GreatSchools team: for all the support and enthusiasm even from 3,000+ miles away!

Liana Lo Conte, Ben Jokerst and Liz Richard (GreatSchools): for providing data and daily ESP headcounts, double checking things, and helping solve any problem that popped up.

Jodi Goldberg (GreatSchools MKE): for being there every step of the way, for cheering on our successes and reminding us to breathe when things got a little crazy, and for being one of the good people in the world.

Phyllis Levioff: for cheerleading, boundless optimism and helping us over hurdles whenever needed.

Jocelyn Bush, Pamela Prudencio and Nadia Washington: for helping build GreatSchools DC into what it is today, we wish you all the best in your new endeavors and are thankful for having had all of you in the GreatSchools DC family.

Kelli Anderson and Tamika Joyner (GreatSchools DC): for doing whatever it takes to help make this program a success, overcoming unforeseen obstacles this past year with can-do attitudes, and most importantly, bringing enthusiasm, teamwork, and smiles with you every day!
